QUALITY. You can be sure of success in growing spring flowering bulbs if you plant large, vigorous bulbs. Our Daffodils are all No. 1 grade, "Double-Nose" bulbs which produce 50 to 100 per cent more flowers the first year than "round" bulbs. Our tulips are "top size" which is the best grade obtainable. The other bulbs in our list are of equally good grades.

ORDER EARLY. The Cape Bulbs (Freesias, Ixias, etc.) are ready for shipment in September; Narcissi, Tulips, Dutch Iris and Hyacinths are ready in October.

NARCISSI or DAFFODILS

Narcissi are the most satisfactory spring flowering bulbs in California Gardens. Since they increase rapidly they are a good "garden investment". They will grow in either full sun or light shade, although in warm sections of California the best results are obtained with late blooming varieties if they receive some shade during the hotter part of the day.

Plant bulbs from October to December. Set them 4 to 6 inches apart and 4 to 5 inches deep, planting the largest bulbs deepest. When the flowering season is over, allow the foliage to ripen. If leaves are removed before ripened, there will be few blooms the following season.

Our Narcissi bulbs are of the largest size and are all "Double-nose"; that is, each bulb will produce two or more flower stalks.

TULIPS

Plant tulips from October to December. Late October and November is the most favorable time although planting may be done as late as early January. Early and shallow planting will result in short stems and inferior blooms. Plant tulip bulbs six inches deep in sandy soil and 5 inches deep in heavy soil. Place a handful of sand under each bulb and water thoroughly. Do not mix fresh manure or chemical fertilizer in the soil where it will come in contact with the bulbs.

Our tulips are imported from one of the best Holland growers and are all of the largest, "selected top" size.
